Protect confidential printed documents against internal leaks: New technologies for well known threats

AlpVision, headquartered in Switzerland, is launching an innovative document protection solution that is fully integrated with Microsoft Office. AlpVision is a leading supplier of digital security printing solutions that secure printed documents and fight counterfeiting. This innovation provides both author and recipient identification for any printed document with only a few mouse clicks. Confidential printed documents are then protected against leaks. The same technology is easily adapted to fight any tampering or counterfeiting for all printed documents.

Internal printed documents leaks can endanger seriously any business or organization. Based on its genuine patented Cryptoglyph technology (Crypto = cipher, Glyph = marks) and developed in cooperation with governmental offices, the AlpVision solution prints a large number of very small dots on the entire surface of the document, which will generate a light grey background. These dots contain a ciphered information (128 bit cipher key minimum), which contain the author's and recipient's names. This information would be retrievable on only a small part of the document if torn. Detection is even possible many years since the document was printed. The solution resists photocopying as well.

AlpVision will provide software licenses to have the leak protection integrated into the Microsoft Office environment. This small software can easily be deployed with standard IT deployment tools. It works with any office printer (laser, inkjet). To create a leak protected document, just a few mouse clicks are enough before printout. Therefore anyone being capable of working with MS Word is also capable to protect a document.
